

One of the major reasons for moving to Seattle was to become more engaged in a culture that avidly supports technology and “the web.” Through Meetups I discovered a group I could not pass up the opportunity to join and was very pleasantly surprised to be rewarded with such excellent company, brilliant minds, and cigars!

It didn't hurt that the gathering happened on a rooftop in Downtown Seattle with a spectacular view of the city either.

We will see what comes of this and other wonderful people I have had the privilege of meeting since relocating, but so far the opportunities have been spectacular and I am thrilled to see where these new connections lead both personally and professionally.
