

After more than 4 years, my trusty First Gen iWatch has started to show its age. The adhesive for the assembly unit and the screen has clearly run its course.

Now luckily this doesn't appear to be anything but adhesive at the end of its life, so some alcohol and cotton swabs should be all I need with some trusty super glue.

After applying some Super Glue; I let it sit for a few minutes with my iPad laying on top of it with the screen wrapped in some microfiber.

And I can happily report that my little handyman project is complete and was successful.
